

Appendix I Former Directors of Zoo and Major Staff System

I Former Directors

The title of Zoo Director has undergone several changes. During the Japanese Yuanshan Period, it wasn't until 1940 when the Zoo had its first full-time director. Prior to this, the Zoo Director was served concurrently by the first-level supervisor of the Taipei City Government, and as the competent authority constantly changed, the director also changed. These "directors" were full-time administrative staff that did not specialize in animals, and actually belong as zoo supervisors under the administrative system. During this period, the real on-site person in charge at the Zoo is the Animal-Rearing Officer servicing at the Zoo, and is called "Officer" among the people, and these officers can be said as being closer to the director in the modern sense.

The title of Zoo Director after the war was "Director" during the early period, was changed to "Administrator" in 1953, and was changed again to "Officer" in 1957, it wasn't until 1970 that it was changed to "Director," and "Director" was still used after the moving of the Zoo until today.
