

Department of Government Ethics of Taipei City Government Resorts Ethics Volunteers to Rid Electoral Corruption and Promote Food Safety.

With several alarming food-safety incidents took place recently that potentially affect people's lives and wellbeing, the Taipei City Government actively promotes the food-safety platform. Hence, the Department of Government Ethics projected the training the ethics volunteers, strengthen the awareness and knowledge of the relevant laws and regulations, and thereby consolidate the future food-safety inspection investigative talents.

As for the dubbed "nine-in-one election of local public officials of 2018", in order for the concept of a corruption-free election to deepen into the minds of the general public, spreading the message to enhance the electorates' determination to fight electoral bribery, at the October 3rd, the Department of Government Ethics organized a professional training program, covering the topics of food safety and electoral corruptions.

The senior prosecutor of the Taipei Metropolitan Prosecutor's Office Gao Wenzheng was invited as the guest speaker, introducing various forms of electoral bribery and the concept of election-related rules and regulations. At the same time, in order to strengthen food-safety management and raise public awareness, invited to speak in the course of Food Sanitation Management Act and Practices, Wen Changan, the field expert, demonstrated the latest health-related knowledge combining current affairs analysis, effectively enhancing volunteers' risk awareness of food-safety and health.

Shen Fengliang, Chief Director of the Department of Government Ethics, stated that the training program for corruption-free elections and food safety ended successfully, providing substantial knowledge and strengthen the investigative skills for the participants. For intelligence regarding electoral bribery, please call the Department of Government Ethics on 1999 extension 7758.