TAIPEI NIGHT

Evenings in Taipei are relaxing and the city features a colorful, bustling night life. Spread throughout the city, the night markets are the best attractions for visitors and diners.

Night markets in Taipei city feature a variety of merchandise including clothing, jewelry and accessories. Also they are the best places for looking for traditional souvenirs. The most unforgettable characteristic of these markets, however, is their snacks. A variety of types and flavors of these traditional foods give visitors a delicious and unforgettable experience.

Night markets in Taipei show the diverse culture and food habits of Taiwan and have been one of the tourist attractions for foreign visitors. Recently, Taipei city government has made efforts to plan and support the night markets, transforming into a renewed image and with unique characteristics and combining with the recreation in the neighborhood. In addition, tourists not only have the opportunity to enjoy traditional culture, but also gain an excellent experience at night markets.

This book helps visitors make good use of the Taipei MRT network to arrive at the various night markets, and provides information about the unique snacks and popular items.

A1 Huaxi Street Tourist Night Market

Huaxi Street Night Market has a 50-year history. With its canopy, palace-style archway and lanterns, Huaxi Street was recognized in 2010's as the best night market for shopping. Huaxi Street was famous for medicinal foods made with snakes and turtles in the early days. However, in recent years many unique businesses, such as foot massage parlors and name painting stalls, have also set up shop here. There are many delicacies here that should not be missed, such as the Tainan danzai noodle, Beigang sticky rice congee, and fresh Hokkaido squid.

Most Popular

Tiny Dragons on Your Table

Huaxi Street Tourist Night Market is renowned internationally for its exotic meats, seafood, and foods, and the most famous of all is undoubtedly the snake. Tourists visiting the Huaxi Street Tourist Night Market—or “Snake Alley”, as it is called in the early days—can view giant golden cobras and taste cuisines made with snakes. Every part of the snake's body is edible and nutritious, as evidenced by the sweet and refreshing snake meat soup, and the uniquely flavored snake liver, snake blood, and snake wine. Many people come to Huaxi Street either to get a taste of the uncommon or to test their courage by eating snake and herbal-based dishes.

A2 Guangzhou Street Tourist Night Market

Turn onto Guangzhou Street from Xiyuan Road, and you will immediately feel the lively atmosphere of the night market. Stalls for carnival games, goods as far the eyes can see, and the sound of merchants competing for customers all add up to a scene that is characteristic of Taiwan. There are a wide variety of products sold at the Guangzhou Street Night Market, including household products, clothing, toys, and last but not least, foods that cannot be missed. Oyster omelet, steak, shaved ice, and squid thick soup are all worth lining up for.

Most Popular

- Jialin Teppanyaki
- Oyster Omelete

Eating and Praying at the Longshan Temple

Longshan Temple at Monga, built during the days of Qianlong Emperor of the Qing Dynasty, is an exquisite architecture of high artistic merit, and one of the most popular tourism destinations in Taipei. The main deity worshipped in the temple is Guanyin, and the temple is built as a traditional three-layer Chinese quadrangle. The temple features many famous artworks by renowned calligraphers and sculptors, and is the site of the only cast copper dragon pillar in Taiwan. After visiting Longshan Temple, the 4 night markets in Xichang Street, Wuzhou Street, Guangzhou Street and Huaxi Street are great places to hang out and taste local delicacies.

A3 Wuzhou Street Tourist Night Market

Wuzhou Street Tourist Night Market is located next to Huaxi Street and Guangzhou Street, and features mainly traditional cuisine. Some of the more unique dishes found in the Wuzhou Street Tourist Night Market include pork knuckles with peanuts, fried eel, and stir fry. The southern part of the night market features more restaurants that serve aiyu jelly, tempura and Teppanyaki steaks. Many locals and tourists alike often come to Wuzhou Street in search of culinary delights.

Most Popular

- Pork Knuckles with Peanuts
- Sashimi
- Duck with salted vegetables
- Fried Eel Noodles
- Cherished Memory Aiyu Jelly
- Seafood Stir Fry
- Dianfa Grass Jelly

Common Whole Cow Dishes • Nutritious Lamb Hot Pot

1.Common Whole Cow Dishes

In Wuzhou night market, the spectacular but inexpensive whole cow dishes are always served. The beef with its original taste and gravy is fried with high open fire and excellent skills. The sweet and refreshing organ soup is extraordinary as well.

2.Nutritious Lamb Hot Pot

At Wuzhou Street, the lamb in the hot pot was boiled quickly before it is stir-fried with selected Chinese medicine, making the soup thick and sweet with a hint of herbs. The fragrance from lamb stir-fried in sesame oil can always attract a big crowd during the winter time.

A4 Xichang Street Tourist Night Market

Many scenes of the 2010 hit film Monga was shot at the nearby Longshan Temple, Herb Lane, and Bopiliao, and the area became one of the most popular tourism destinations as a result. Xichang Street Tourist Night Market is located right next to Longshan Temple, and the area has long been a commercial hub. Recently Taipei City Government has re-organized the layout of the night market so that the stalls are now located in the middle of the street. The stalls near Guangzhou Street usually sell clothes and household items while the food is found on Xichang Street near Guilin Road. Famous foods that can be found here include the tofu pudding, grass tea, glutinous oil rice, and pot stickers. If you find yourself visiting Longshan Temple to pray for luck, why not take a stroll down Xichang Street?

Most Popular

- Old-Style Glutinous Oil Rice
- Pork Belly in Four Medicine Soup
- Pot Stickers
- Tainan Rice Cake
- Stinky Tofu
- Grass Tea
- Tofu Pudding
- Candied Fruit

B1 Nanjichang Night Market

Xichang Herb Lane

Lane 224 next to the night market is the famous Herb Lane where intense herbal aromas fill the air. There are a few stores dedicated to selling fresh, medicinal herbs as well as dry herbs that the customer can bring home for cooking. The stores also sell ready to drink herbal drinks such as grass tea, bitter tea, and roselle tea. If you want to enjoy a cup of mellow and sweet grass tea while catching a glimpse of the old Taiwan, Herb Lane is the perfect place.

B1 Nanjichang Night Market

Nanjichang Night Market is located in a nameless alley between lane 307 and 315, Sec. 2, Zhonghua Road. The night market received its namesake because there was an airport, or “jichang”, nearby during the days of Japanese occupation. The public housing built later made this location a hub of activities and a place famous for cheap snack food. Different items are on sale during the day and at night. Many dumpling restaurants have opened in lane 309 in recent years, and as a result the lane is now known as the Dumpling Lane. In 2012, Nanjichang Night Market became internationally renowned for its delicious Ba-wan (meat dumpling).

Most Popular

C1 Jingmei Night Market

309 Dumpling Lane

Many dumpling restaurants have located in lane 309, Sec. 2, Zhonghua Road, next to the Nanjichang Night Market. Each restaurant on the “Dumpling Lane” has its own secret unique recipe, and you can easily find one flavor that you can enjoy. Using ingredients such as the popular cabbage and leeks and the less common leek sprouts and Chinese cabbage, the handmade fresh dumplings are delicious even without extra condiments or spices. Every customer would swear that their favorite restaurant is the best one, but the only thing the restaurants have in common is how good their businesses are.

C1 Jingmei Night Market

Jingmei Street is located in the busy Wenshan shopping district, and it looks drastically different during the day and at night. During the day, it's a traditional market that sells fresh fish, meat, vegetable and everyday products. At night, it turns into a night market that features delicious foods and clothing with hundreds of vendors. Due to its convenient location, the night market is very popular, especially among students and office workers. Other than the latest fashion, there are many stalls that use recipes that have been passed down generation after generation, such as vermicelli, tofu pudding, pan fried buns etc.

Most Popular

- 168 Teppanyaki
- Baby Dumpling
- Shanghai Pan Fried Buns
- Jingmei Tofu Pudding
- Song-Man Restaurant (on the 2nd floor of Jingmei market, offering Beijing, Sichuan cuisine and Shanghai dim-sum)

Friendly Restroom Project

The night market, one of the essential elements of life in Taiwan, sells toys, household items, as well as delicious foods. However, most people may have trouble finding a restroom while enjoying the sights. In order to solve this problem, the Taipei City Market Administration Office has began the Friendly Restroom Project. The shops put the LED sign of Friendly Restroom Project or stickers of identification mark on their doors for the public to notice. Please feel free to use the service.

1. Beef Noodles

Boiling big chunks of beef at low heat for making soup stock gives the soup an irresistible aromatic flavor. This, a famous traditional dish in Taipei, is served in three styles; brown soup, clear soup and tomato soup.

2. Rice with Pork Knuckles

Fragrant and chewy steamed rice with a flavored braised pork sauce topping and combined with fatty and tender Pork knuckles. This dish is a food lovers' favorite, and the most fulfilling rice dish for your stomach.

3. Oyster omelets

Pan-fried fresh oysters, a topping with thickening cornstarch, one egg, some green leafy veggies, soy sauce and sweet chili sauce, this dish is the most commonly seen snack in night markets.

4. Zongzi

A traditional delicacy made with glutinous rice and other ingredients such as dried mussel, pork, and egg yolk, all wrapped with leaves into a unique triangular shape.

5. Vermicelli in starches soup with oysters

Commonly known as vermicelli paste, this dish is made with well-cooked red vermicelli, a topping with some large fresh oysters, chewy pig colon and fragrant cilantro. Add some minced garlic, dark vinegar and hot chili for more flavor.

6. Stinky Tofu

Fermented tofu radiates a unique yet nearly intolerable odor, but after it is deep fried at high temperature, it is transformed into irresistible and addictive golden yummy bites of tofu. With spicy and sour pickled vegetables, garlic soy sauce and hot chili.

7. Tempura

Mash fish meat into a paste. Continually mix and knead into a thick liquid, take a small amount to form into a round flat shape, and then deep fry until both sides become golden brown, what you get is a very popular snack in night markets-tempura.

8. Rice with braised pork

Slow-cooked minced pork on steamed rice gives plain rice extra flavor and taste.

9. Spring Roll

As a special snack for folk holidays, it is made with a thin flour wrap, and its stuffing contains shredded carrots, bean curds, bean sprouts, peanut powder and more. Top with sweet chili sauce for the final touch of a mouthwatering spring roll. You can also try a different taste by having it deep fried.

10. Pork rib stewed in Chinese medicine

The pork ribs are cooked in soup with Chinese herbs, resulting in an authentic Taiwanese flavor that can fill you with energy.

11. Sticky rice in tube

Steam or deep fry chewy sausages casings filled with glutinous rice. They are then cut open and topped with seasonings for a tasty night market snack. Nowadays, a unique and perfect way to further enjoy them is to insert a link of pork sausage and you have a double-sausage sandwich.

12. Taiwanese fried chicken

Deep-fry chicken chunks at high temperature until they turn crispy, combine with aromatic basil leaves, sprinkle some salt and pepper, then you have one of the most popular snacks in Taiwan.

13. Bing with scallion

The flour pancake of multiple thin layers is pan-fried at slow heat to slightly golden brown, with scallion's unique aroma and seasoning sauce, it is the best choice to satisfy your cravings.

14. Stewed pork in steamed bun

Soft flour bun wraps creamy and slightly greasy soy sauce stewed streaky pork, topping with flavorings of cilantro and peanut powder, this is the most flavorful traditional Taiwanese folk style snack.

15. Pork Sausages

Pork sausage is definitely one of the most popular night market snacks. In recent years, they have evolved into various flavors with enhanced taste.

16. Chicken cooked with sesame oil

First stir-fried chicken meat with sesame oil and aged ginger, then add rice wine to cook this winery and flavorful sesame oil chicken soup. Rich and creamy sesame flavor, compounding with rice wine's aroma, this delicacy is complete with perfect appearance, fragrance and taste.

17. Round cake with red bean paste filling

Also known as Wheel cake, this snack is made by pouring flour on heated ironware at high-temperature, adding various fillings such as red beans, butter or cabbage on one side of the flour cap, and then covering it with the other side, forming a great taste of crispy brown crust with warm and creamy fillings.

18. Fried baozi

Slightly pan-fry the steamed buns with stuffing (also known as Shui Jian Bao), and then add some water mixed with flour and cover them up until the water boils and the buns are cooked. Unlike steamed buns' soft and chewy texture, pan-fried buns are slightly burned and crispy.

19. Mochi

Steam glutinous rice, smashing it into dough, continually kneading it to reach perfect stickiness, and then boil it in hot water before serving. The unique cooking method is the only way to make this popular snack.

20. Bing with pepper seasoning

Made with thick flour dough stuffed with juicy pork, scallion and black pepper, this baked snack is mouthwatering. When biting into the crispy bun, the juicy stuffing will burst forth, offering a wonderful taste.

21. Fruit with syrup coating on a stick

The traditional way to make this popular snack is to pierce Lindley's pears with a bamboo stick, then add a layer of transparent reddish sweet crispy coating on it. Now Lindley's pears are replaced with other fresh fruits such as tomatoes and strawberries for a more diverse flavor.

22. Pao-pao Ice

Put some lemon, blueberries, pineapple and other fruits into a bowl, and then place it under an ice shaving machine. Allow flaky ice to fall into the bowl like snow flakes until it is full, and quickly stir the shaved ice with ingredients with a spoon into the best refreshing snack of various flavors.

23. Tofu Pudding

This unique Taiwanese dessert can be served warm or cold. It is similar to tofu, but has an extra smooth and distinctive texture. You can add some peanuts or green beans to it and have it refreshingly cold or soothingly warm.

24. Frog Eggs

As one of the specialties of Taiwan, tapioca balls are added to a variety of icy desserts. Because of their shape and appearance, they look like frog eggs and thus the name. They have a chewy texture and the refreshing drinks are bound to be well-liked.
